DEATHS.

CORRINGTON.

Mr. Cale W. Corrington, aged about sixty, one of the most prominent business men of Millersburg, died at his home in that city late yesterday afternoon of a complication of heart and kidney troubles. He had been ill but a short time, having been taken sick suddenly Tuesday with an attack of acute indigestion.

Mr. Corrington is survived by his widow and several brothers. The funeral arrangements had not been completed last night. A more extended notice will be given in our Tuesday issue.

Many Paris young men doubtless felt it more important to agree with their prospective fathers-in-law on politics than with their prospective wives.

Some time ago a certain Paris restaurant posted in a conspicuous place a sign bearing this legend: "The Meals You Eat Here Make You Think Of Home." Well, don't the meals you eat in any restaurant do that, in one way or another? We say they do!
